

Remodeling trust

Choosing a Contractor for Remodeling Your Home

Your selection of a contractor is one of the most important keys to a successful project.

You finally decided to take the remodeling plunge. You've got your financing in place, you have a vision of exactly what you want your home to be. Now you're ready for the biggest step of all: choosing a contractor. The importance of finding the right firm when embarking on a remodel-several months or longer.

WHAT'S IN A REPUTATION?

Any homeowner who has contemplated a remodel has heard it before, but it bears repeating: Reputation comes first. You'll want to work only with a firm that has a tradition of excellence, one that has the time and on budget, over and over again. Contractors build an excellent reputation by doing all that and more. This kind of dedication to delivering outstanding work is how Paul Davis Restoration & Remodeling has earned its reputation for excellence.

NEXT STEPS

At Paul Davis, we recognize that you are the best judge of your remodeling needs, so we will work closely with you to ensure that the final results match your needs precisely. And to keep you informed and in charge every step of the way, we follow a time-tested process based on the following:

1. Complimentary in-home consultation to discuss and outline your project
2. Follow-up meetings to further assess needs and develop your unique design solution
3. Written assessment and proposal
4. Timeline showing scheduled milestones
5. Regular project updates to discuss progress and eling project cannot be stressed too much. The relationship between homeowner and contractor is unlike any other professional arrangement. This person or team will not only be performing surgery on your single largest asset—your home—but will also be in close daily contact with you and your family for

Any homeowner has heard it before: Reputation comes first.

experience and expertise to do the job. Contractors gain a good reputation by performing quality work and finishing projects on solicit feedback

6. Walk-through inspection to ensure that everything has been completed to your satisfaction